Art and Archaeology

At the Washington Meeting, December 31, 1912, the Council of the Archaeological Institute authorized the officers to transform the BULLETIN into a non-technical illustrated monthly magazine as rapidly as was consistent with financial stability and the maintenance of high editorial and artistic standards. The name adopted by the Council at Montreal, January 3, 1914, is ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY.

The first (JULY) number appeared in June and the succeeding numbers followed every other month during 1914. Owing to the uncertain financial conditions incident to the European War, the Council at the Annual Meeting in Philadelphia, December 29, 1914, voted that ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY continue to be published every other month until the Executive Committee should otherwise authorize. As soon as circumstances justify, the Executive Committee will be asked to authorize its appearance as a monthly magazine, in accordance with the original resolution of the Council.

The purpose of ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY is to give people in an interesting and attractive way the information they wish to have in the wide realm embraced by its name. This information is imparted by interesting reading matter prepared by men and women who are masters in their several fields and by beautiful pictures produced by approved modern processes. Human interest, timeliness, and literary merit are the tests applied in the selection of articles, and artistic quality and appropriateness are the standards in the selection of illustrations.

The contributed articles are of varied interest, embracing the fields of Oriental, Greek, Roman, Christian Renaissance, and American archaeology and art. Full page illustrations are made an attractive feature. Notes from the various fields and brief paragraphs concerning archaeological discoveries, new books, and other items of current interest are worthy of mention.

The editorial Staff of ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY is as follows:

General Editor: DAVID MOORE ROBINSON, Johns Hopkins University.

Art Editor: WILLIAM H. HOLMES, Smithsonian Institution.

Managing Editor: MITCHELL CARROLL, General Secretary, Archaeological Institute of America.

Associate Editor: RALPH VAN DEMAN MAGOFFIN, Johns Hopkins University.

Contributing Editors: H. RUSHTON FAIRCLOUGH, Stanford University; CHARLES H. WELLER, University of Iowa; ALBERT T. CLAY, Yale University; FREDERICK W. HODGE, Smithsonian Institution; CHARLES T. CURRELLY, Royal Ontario Museum; GEORGE H. EDGELL, Harvard University. (Others to be selected.)

Subscription per annum, $2.00. Single numbers, 35 cents.

Contributions and editorial correspondence should be addressed to ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY, The Octagon, Washington, D. C.

Subscriptions and advertisements will be received by The Waverly Press, Baltimore, Md.; and by the General Secretary of the Archaeological Institute, The Octagon, 1741, New York Avenue, Washington, D. C.

Issued every other month.
